Forecast for Monday 14 Jun 2021

Weather: Initially clear to begin with, but a band of cloud will move across the park from the northwest during the morning and some cloud will cover the summits. This cloud will soon begin to break up from midday onward, thus northwest facing slopes and summits will likely be most affected. Spells of sunshine will return through the afternoon, with conditions clearing more widely into the evening and overnight period.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 100% initially. This will fall to 30% between 08:00 and 12:00 as the cloud front moves through. Chances rising to 70% for the rest of the day.

Visibility: Cloud bases falling to 300m on northwest facing slopes and summits during the day. Hills above 300m are likely to have fog with visibility down to 50m for a time between 0800 and 1200. Visibility becoming very good from 15:00 onwards.
